Subject Eagleton

Paul:

I am directing this email only to the commissioners, because I don't think we should air our disagreements among staff until we have at least had a chance to discuss controversial issues with each other in person. It appears from Gracia's email that we will have a chance do so next week in Denver.

In the meantime, I feel compelled to respond to your email regarding Eagleton.

- (1) As I stated last night in my email to Hans, we have an on-going responsibility to monitor the expenditure of all our federal funds, including to government contractors who are contractually obligated to deliver unbiased research. However, I will remind you that we did not contract with Eagleton merely to provide a compilation of state laws and procedures. Rather, we contracted with Eagleton (and indirectly with Moritz through Eagleton) to provide both research AND analysis of provisional voting and voter ID. Invariably, the analysis portion of their final product will be from a professional (and institutional) perspective, and will NOT represent any one researcher's personal point of view. If it does, then Eagleton and Moritz risk damaging their credibility not just with the EAC, but with other federal government agencies which undoubtedly contract with their respective institutions on other projects. I doubt seriously that either institution would risk such damage and allow one team member to inject bias into the work. Moreover, the peer review group that is (or has) been assembled by Eagleton is designed to cure any lingering concerns about potential insitutional or personal bias...Eagleton has been responsive to your feedback on this issue, to the point where they have removed all perspective representatives of the advocacy community on the peer review group (because they felt they could not achieve political "balance" from the advocacy groups). If there is some person (or persons)which you would like to see Eagleton include in the review group, it is my understanding that such inclusion is but a mere phone call away.
- (2) You will recall that at our meeting last week, I raised the exact same concern about the Eagleton progress report, and asked for clarification from staff regarding the details of this particular work (i.e., fraud) on the part of Eagleton. I expect staff (or us directly) to ask questions of Eagleton (as we would any contractor) and determine if their work in this area is within the scope of work (and contract) we all agreed to. If it isn't then we re-direct them, just as we have done, for example with Kim Brace and EDS.
- (3) Finally, I must express my disappointment, Paul, regarding your comments on Professor Tokagi that you chose to include in your email. While I may disagree with Hans on his particular analysis of the perceived personal bias of this contract, at least his allegations regarding Professor Tokagi's potential bias are grounded in fact (and he recited them as such in his email). You, on the other hand, have chosen to accuse Professor Tokagi of manipulating the work on this project based on your "suspicion." With all due respect, that unfortunate accusation borders, in my view, on a breach of professional decorum and I cannot let it go without response.

We clearly have some political issues that are increasingly being injected into nearly every discussion at the EAC table. I have stated both to you and Gracia individually that I believe this trend in part represents a "maturation" of the EAC and I am not uncomfortable with it. However, if we are going to bring accusations of subjectivity and bias to the table, then I will expect that such a filter will be applied across the board to ALL projects undertaken by the EAC, and that such a filter will be based solidly on fact, and not on innuendo, personal hunches or suspicions.

I send this email, as always, with the highest degree of respect and friendship toward you. And yet, my disappointment is evident in your comments regarding an esteemed and respected member of the legal academic community (and somone whom I regard as a personal friend.)

I look forward to our continued discussion on this matter. And as for the substance of Hans' concern regarding Moritz, I stand by my email which I sent to everyone last night.

Subject Consultants

Since we are about to hire Tova Wang (and two others) to be our consultants/researchers on the voter fraud study, I thought I would give you a heads-up about a well-written commentary that Tova just published. It is attached below. Paul's newfound political "fervor" still has me riled-up, needless to say. Hope your travels are going well.

ID and Voting Rights

Laws requiring voters to present very specific forms of ID are becoming the voting rights barrier of the 21st Century.

Tova Andrea Wang

August 29, 2005

Laws requiring all voters to present very specific forms of identification before exercising their right to vote are rapidly becoming the voting rights barrier of the 21st Century. Last Friday, the Department of Justice approved a new Georgia law requiring every voter to show a government-issued photo ID. The Department of Justice was required to review the measure and "preclear" it because that state is covered by Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. Although many legal scholars and voting rights advocates had argued the Department should deny its implementation because it would lead to disenfranchisement of minority voters, the Department evidently did not agree. Indiana passed similar legislation this year, and several groups have sued the state on the grounds that it violates the Voting Rights Act.

Next up is Arizona. Last week, after months of resisting, the governor of Arizona signed off on a plan for implementing Proposition 200, which required identification from all voters. Arizona's new rule is that all voters must show government issued photo identification or a tribal identification to vote. Alternatively, the voter may present two current pieces of identification from a narrow list of potential documents that show the voter's name and current address, such as a utility and phone bills.

The most problematic provision is this: if the voter is not able to present a government issued photo ID or these two documents to the satisfaction of the poll worker, that voter is simply disenfranchised, asked to leave the polling place without casting a ballot. The voter may not even cast a provisional ballot. For example, if the voter brings a gas bill and a water bill, but the poll worker decides the water bill is not "dated within ninety days of the election," that person will be absolutely denied the right to vote. In addition to being a violation of the Help America Vote Act's mandate that any voter who shows up at the polls and believes he or she is registered and eligible to vote must be given a provisional ballot, this raises serious voting rights issues.

As a group of preeminent voting rights scholars have argued in Georgia, under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, a covered jurisdiction may not implement a change in its election laws or practices unless the jurisdiction demonstrates the change will be free of any racially discriminatory purpose or effect. The objective of Section 5 "has always been to insure that no voting-procedure changes would be made that would lead to a retrogression in the position of racial minorities with respect to their effective exercise of the electoral franchise."

As in Georgia , Arizona—especially given the possibility of a complete denial of the vote—has not met that burden of proof. It is up to the state to demonstrate that the ID requirement, which contemplates complete disenfranchisement of certain voters, will not have a discriminatory impact. So, for example, has the state examined whether most voters have or have easy access to the necessary documents? Have state officials investigated what groups are likely to lack the kinds of identification required? Since the law puts the burden on the state, the state must undertake these types of inquiries before it is permitted to go forward with this scheme—for there is a great deal of evidence indicating that it is indeed minorities who lack even one form let alone two forms of the types of identification contemplated.

The difficulty is that the poor and minorities are least likely to own motor vehicles and possess a driver's license—the most commonly accepted form of identification. Indeed, in 1994, the U.S. Department of Justice found that African-Americans in Louisiana were 4 to 5 times less likely to have government-sanctioned photo ID than white residents. As a result, the Department denied pre-clearance for that state's proposed photo ID requirement because it "would lead to retrogression in the position of racial minorities with respect to their effective exercise of the electoral franchise."

The evidence continues to mount. A June 2005 study by the University of Wisconsin. found that less than half (47 percent) of Milwaukee County African American adults and 43 percent of Hispanic adults have a valid drivers license compared to 85 percent of white adults outside Milwaukee. One Arizona county reported in February that it was forced to reject nearly 75 percent of new voter registration forms for failure to provide adequate proof of citizenship.

Furthermore, for those who do not have the kinds of up-to-date non-photo ID necessary—and many minority and urban voters, for example those who live in multiple family dwellings simply will not—getting identification from the government will present costs and burdens for voters who simply want to exercise their constitutional right to vote. A certified copy of a birth certificate costs from $10.00 to $45.00, depending on the state; a passport costs $85.00; and certified naturalization papers cost $19.95. It may not be so very easy for people who work more than one job or have small children to take the time during business hours, drive to a Department of Drivers Services, and wait on line to get necessary identification. Indeed, most of the state's offices are open 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Has the state researched the potential disparate impacts on getting non-photo ID? If not, it has not met its burden under the Act.

There has been a great deal of controversial discussion over the Voting Rights Act recently because some sections—including Section 5—are due to expire. The Act was passed in order to eliminate procedures aimed at the disenfranchisement of particular groups. That it is still necessary is being demonstrated today in Arizona and Georgia

Subject Call from Paul Vinovich

I took a telephone call this morning from Paul Vinovich. He had attempted to reach Gracia, but since she was not here, he asked Sheila if I was in the office so he spoke to me.

Paul was very upset with comments that Tova Wang had made at yesterday's AEI's meeting in which she basically indicated that voter fraud did not exist in the USA. He asked how a person who believes that voter fraud does not exist—or not seem at least willing to listen to both sides—can be hired by the EAC to do a study on voter fraud/voter intimidation. I explained to Paul (as I have now had to explain to many others) that Tova was "balanced" on the study with Job Severbrov. He did not know Job but was well—aware of Tova's positions and was concerned that her public comments indicate that she will not be fair in looking at this issue. I explained to Paul that we were monitoring the work of our consultants on this study and no report would be issued publicly without the support of at least three commissioners. I sent him some background information on Job. I think this study will need close monitoring.

Subject 9:30 Discussion on Tuesday

I am suggesting that we have our 9:30 discussion tomorrow to cover a couple of things:

- 1. The four of us need to spend some "quality" time together. Tomorrow will be a good time to pin down the earliest date when we will all be in DC and can devote a 1/2 day or so to discuss election of officers, etc. Perhaps on tomorrow we can develop an agenda for those discussions.
- 2. Defining balance for the make-up of the Working Group for our Voter Fraud/Intimidation project.

Subject Working Group for Voter Fraud/Intimidation Project

Peg:

Following is the guidance that the commissioners are providing with respect to the composition of the working group for the Voter Fraud/Voter Intimidation project and the selection process.

8 Member Working Group

Participants to be chosen by the two consultants in consultation with you. There are two slots that will require consensus. If consensus can't be reached, then you should make the decision. If there is real disagreement among the three of you, then the commissioners will make the selection.

The participation process prescribed below provides for political balance. As always, we ask that the group be diverse with respect to participation of men, women and minorities.

- 4 people from the Academic, Legal and Advocacy sectors 2 to be chosen by Tova and 2 to be chosen by Job. We support your recommendation that there be at least one academic in the working group to help advise and comment on the construct of the database and you should provide that guidance to Tova and Job.
- 2 State Level Election Officials 1 selected by Tova and 1 selected by Job
- 1 Nonpartisan local election official (selected by you or by consensus among the 3 of you)
- 1 Representative from DOJ you had recommended a man who was retired from the Voting Section or perhaps someone else with similar credentials to be selected by you or by consensus among the three of you. We assume that Craig Dosantos (?sp) will participate in this project as an "advisor" and therefore would not take up a slot on the working group.

I will be on travel on Friday (tomorrow), however please feel free to call me on my cell should you have questions or need additional clarification.

Many thanks for your terrific work.

Subject Draft Agenda for Standards Board

Paul:

I've taken a shot at a draft agenda, but we have much work to do on this item. As you will see, my current vision, at least with regard to the Standards Board, is to have a series of presentations regarding all of our research projects, particularly those in which written draft reports will be ready for consideration, such as the provisional voting study and the voter ID study. However, there are too many research projects on the plate right now, and not enough time in a day and a half to be able to present all of them to both the Standards Board and BOA (not to mention "fatigue factor" if we overload these folks during this meeting). So, I've had to prioritize.

Anyway, attached is what I have come up with, and at the very bottom of the draft agenda, you will see the research projects that I left off the list. Next steps are for you to develop a similar draft agenda for the BOA, and I would suggest that you do something similar for the BOA, such that we will have concurrent session going on (Standards Board in one room, BOA in another)...for example, when the briefing for provisional voting is taking place for the SB members, you can be having a concurrent session for the BOA in another room on voter ID. Then we switch. (Same type of format for Day 2). This will allow us to have concurrent sessions going on simultaneously but we'll have to coordinate the schedule of these sessions. In the current draft agenda, I have the two boards coming together in the afternoon of the second day, but we may want them to start with a joint plenary session and end with a joint plenary session (though that is tough because they each have group-specific business to conduct when they first arrive — at least the Standards Board does, such as adoption of permanent bylaws).

Anyway, this is still VERY MUCH a work in progress, so I welcome your feedback. Also, I think we need to get Tom and Karen involved in this discussion very soon, and then kick it over to the other commissioners for their input once you and I have agreement on a rough draft. After that, I will then want to send it to Peggy Nighswonger so that she can share it with the Executive Board to get their input before it goes final.

I'll wait to hear back from you.

Tamar:

Don't worry about responding to this email, as I know you have to pay attention in class.

I questioned the length of the search term list and also thought that there would be ways to combine some of the search terms. It has been awhile since I have done a Westlaw search, however, which is why I need your input during the teleconference. Yes, I recognize that going through the list of search terms and printing off or saving the resulting references will take time. I'll need you to provide that feedback to our consultants so that we all are on the same page.

Devon has not done a Nexis search before; but, if EAC has access to that database, she is willing to conduct that search. The work would go along with other help she is providing. She will be sorting through my huge files of press clippings on voting fraud, will PDF the sorted clippings, and drop the PDF files onto CDs for our consultants' review.

Summary of Wisconsin Voting Irregularities November 2004

Instances of Illegal Voting, Milwaukee:

A probe led by U.S. Attorney Steve Biskupic and Milwaukee County District Attorney Michael McCann found about 200 cases of illegal felon voting and at least 100 cases of other forms of illegal voting in the city of Milwaukee. Of these, 14 were prosecuted:

10 were instances of felons voting while on probation or parole:

5 are awaiting trial. (one of them is DeShawn Brooks) 1

1 has been acquitted ²

1 has been found guilty in trial (Kimberly Prude)²

3 have reached plea agreements (Milo Ocasio³)

[names: Ethel M. Anderson, Correan F. Edwards, Jiyto L. Cox, Joseph J. Gooden⁴]

4 were instances of double voting:

1 produced a hung jury (Enrique Sanders)²

1 was found incompetent to stand trial and his case was dismissed

1 initially pleaded guilty but now wants a trial. 5

1 is awaiting trial.

Two of those accused of double voting were driven to multiple polling places in a van, but the identity of the driver of the vehicle is not known, and the DA does not suspect conspiracy. ⁶

In addition to these, four people were charged with felonies in the Milwaukee County Circuit Court; two cases were filed against people accused of sending in false registration cards under the auspices of the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now; the other two were felons who voted illegally.⁷

Instances of Illegal Voting, Statewide:

The Legislative Audit Bureau, a nonpartisan research agency, released its analysis of state-wide 2004 election results in September 2005. The agency reviewed the names, addresses, and birthdates of over 348,000 individuals credited with having voted in November 2004, from the electronic voter registration records of 6 cooperating municipalities, and compared them to lists from the Department of Corrections of felons serving sentences on election day, and to lists from the municipalities (to check up on double-voting) and to lists from the US Social Security Administration. LAB's search revealed 105 "questionable" votes:

- 98 ballots cast by ineligible felons, 57 of which were in Madison, 2 in Waukesha, 15 in Eau Claire, 16 in Appleton, 1 in the Village of Ashwaubenon
- 2 instances of double-voting (one in Madison, one in Waukesha).
- 4 votes counted despite the voter's having died two weeks or less before the election.
- 1 case in which a 17-year-old voted in Madison.8

The LAB referred the names of these people to the appropriate District Attorney for prosecution, and several cases are awaiting trial.

It should be noted that this study is not a complete survey of election returns state-wide in Wisconsin; the LAB's analysis is based on the voting records of the six municipalities that provided the LAB with sufficient information to conduct this study.

It should also be noted that the LAB discovered significant error in the data provided them by these municipalities, including:

- 91 records in which the individual's birthdate was incorrectly recorded as later than November 2, 1986
- 97 cases in which a person was mistakenly recorded as having voted twice
- More than 15,000 records were missing birthdates, making it more difficult to determine voter eligibility by comparing these records to lists of felons and deceased persons.

General Findings

Both reports (the Legislative Audit Bureau's and the report of the Joint Task Force on Election Reform convened in Milwaukee) that did in-depth studies of the Wisconsin election returns in 2004 found that there was no evidence of systematic, wide-spread fraud. As the above statistics indicate, there are very few cases in which an individual intentionally voted illegally, and the majority of the discovered instances of fraudulent voting involved felons who were unaware that they were committing a crime. Certainly the number of fraudulent votes, intentional and unintentional, is dwarfed by the amount of administrative error – and the amount of potential there was for fraud.

Duplicate Registrations: In the data from the six participating municipalities, LAB found 3116 records for individuals who appear to be registered more than once in the same municipality (0.9% of the records they reviewed). These duplications were primarily the result of name changes, in which the registrar neglected to remove the old name from the registration list, previous addresses that were not deleted, and misspellings and other typograpahical errors.

Deceased Voters: the LAB study found 783 persons who were deceased, but whose records had not been eliminated from the registration lists. Most of the municipalities participating in the survey rely on obituaries and notifications from family members to purge their voter registration lists of deceased voters.

Felons: Comparing a list of felons from the Department of Corrections to their voter registration data lists, LAB found 453 felons who were registered to vote. This is largely because, although municipal clerks are informed of federal felony convictions, they have no way of obtaining records on state felony convictions. ¹¹

In fall 2002, one of South Dakota's Senators, Democrat Tim Johnson, was up for reelection, and was engaged in a very close race with his Republican challenger, John Thune. Both parties were engaged in a massive voter registration effort, and registered over 24,000 new voters in the five months between the June primary and the November election, increasing the number of registered voters in the state from around 452,000 to 476,000.¹

A month before the election, several counties reported irregularities in some of the voter registration documents they'd received. In response to these reports, South Dakota Attorney General, Mark Barrnett, with the state US Attorney and the FBI, launched an investigation.² Because of the importance of the race in determining the partisan balance of power in the Senate, the voter registration discrepancies got a good deal of national press, including a number of editorials accusing American Indians of stuffing ballot boxes.³ The following allegations were also picked up by out-of-state newssources, including Fox News and the Wall Street Journal:

- Supporters of Thune, who lost the election by 524 votes, collected 47 affidavits from poll watchers claiming voting irregularities.
- Allegations were made that three individuals were offered money by Johnson supporters to vote.

Barrnett, who was alerted to the affidavits when he read an early media report that referred to them, stated that these allegations were either false or didn't warrant concern. "Most of the stuff that's in those other 47 affidavits are the kind of problems that we see in every election. People parking too close to the polling place with a sign in their window, people shooting their mouths off at the polling place. The kind of things that local election officials generally do a pretty good job of policing." The allegations of voter bribery were false.

Though most of the allegations of fraud that were filed turned out to be false, Attorney General Barrnett's investigation did uncover two cases of voter registration fraud:

- The most high-profile case was that of Becky Red Earth-Villeda. Ms. Red Earth-Villeda was hired by the state Democratic party to register voters on the American Indian reservations. She was charged with 19 counts of forgery. No fraudulent voting was associated with Ms. Red Earth-Villeda, nor was there any evidence

- that fraudulent voting occurred in the state.⁵ All charges were dropped in January 2004, when, in court, it was determined by the state handwriting specialist that Ms. Red Earth-Villeda had not forged the signatures.⁶
- Lyle Nichols. Mr. Nichols was arrested for submitting five forged voter registration cards to his county office. He was working for an organization called the Native American Voter Registration Project, and was paid $3 for each registration. The five charges were dropped after Mr. Nichols pleaded guilty to possession of a forgery, and was sentenced with 54 days in jail, which is how much time he'd already spent there because of the charges.

In October 2004, just before the general election, eight people working for a campus GOP Get-out-the-Vote organization resigned their positions after they were accused of submitting absentee ballot requests that had not been notorized properly. Because many of these ballot requests had already been processed and the ballots themselves had been cast, county auditors decided not to pursue the issue.⁸

Besides this incident, there were no reports of voter registration or voting irregularities in the run-up to the November 2004 election, as there were in 2002. However, as with the primary and special elections in June 2004, there were complaints about voter intimidation from American Indians attempting to vote, as well as difficulties with the adoption of the state's new photo identification regulations (after the 2002 election, the state legislature passed more stringent requirements about the kind of identification voters would need to provide at the polls.)

Incidents:

Voter Intimidation: The Four Directions Committee, an organization dedicated to helping American Indians register to vote and get to the polls, got a temporary restraining order on several Republican supporters who, they alleged, had been setting up video equipment outside of polling places on American Indian reservations and following around American Indians who voted early and recording their license plates. ¹⁰

Vote Buying: A Republican election monitor from Virginia, Paul Brenner, claimed that Senator Tom Daschle's campaign was paying people to vote. Local county auditors

Summary of Election Irregularities in Washington State 2004

The 2004 Washington state gubernatorial election was decided by one of the narrowest margins in American electoral history; 261 votes – less than a millionth of the 2.8 million votes cast statewide - separated the leading candidate, Republican Dino Rossi, from his competitor, Democrat Christine Gregoire. The state law-mandated recount that followed brought the margin down to 42 votes, and the subsequent hand recount ordered by the state Democratic Party gave Gregoire the lead, with 129 more votes than Rossi.

The race was so close that the parties decided to go to court to dispute the tally – the Republicans wanted the election results set aside and to have a revote; the Democrats sought a court-legitimated win. Each side set out into the field to find a way to swing the election in their favor. The trial and accompanying investigation, which lasted through the spring of 2005, revealed a litany of problems with the state's election system:

- The process by which absentee ballots are matched to the voters who requested them led to discrepancies between the number of absentee ballots received and the number of votes counted.1
- After the final certification of the election results, King County discovered 96 uncounted absentee ballots, Pierce county found 64, and Spokane County found eight; all had been misplaced following the election, but there was no mechanism for reconciling the number of absentee ballots received with the number counted.²
- Hundreds of felons who were ineligible to vote were able to cast ballots because they were not aware that they needed to apply to have their voting rights reinstated.³
- The system for verifying the eligibility of voters who had cast provisional ballots was found to be questionable.4
- Due to poll worker error, about 100 provisional ballots were improperly cast, and a hundred more were counted, though they were not verified as having been cast by eligible voters.⁵

The trial also revealed that most of these problems were the result of understaffing and human error. In total, 1,678 ballots were proven to have been cast illegally, but none of these votes was subtracted from the candidates' totals because no evidence was produced in court as to how each individual voted. Further, despite the scrutiny that the election

Major Vote Buying Cases Summary

Between 2001 and 2006, allegations and convictions for vote buying and conspiracies to buy votes were concentrated in three states: Illinois, West Virginia and Kentucky.

Deleted: of

Deleted: which have resulted in convictions on these charges a

In East St. Louis, Illinois, nine individuals, including a former city council member and the head of the local Democratic Party, Charles Powell, Jr., were convicted or pled guilty to vote buying and conspiracy to commit election fraud during the 2004 general election. The government's conspiracy case was almost entirely based on taped conversations in which the defendants discussed buying votes for $5 and whether this would be adequate. Federal prosecutors alleged that the vote buying was financed with $79,000 transferred from the County Democratic Party shortly before the election, although county officials have not been charged. Four defendants were convicted of purchasing or offering to purchase at least one vote directly, while Democratic Party chairman was only convicted of conspiracy. Earlier, three precinct officials and one precinct worker pled guilty to buying votes for $5 or $10 in that same election.

Eastern Kentucky has witnessed a series of vote buying cases over the last several years. The most recent revolved around Ross Harris, a Pike County political fundraiser and coal executive, and his associate Loren Glenn Turner. Harris and Turner were convicted in September 2004 of vote buying, mail fraud, and several other counts.³ Prosecutors alleged Harris and Turner conspired to buy votes and provided the necessary funds in an unsuccessful 2002 bid for Pike County district judge by former State Senator Doug Hays. Harris supplied nearly $40,000, Turner laundered the money through straw contributors, and the cash was then disbursed in the form of $50 checks ostensibly for 'vote hauling', the legal practice of paying campaign workers to get voters to the polls which is notorious as a cover for buying votes.⁴ Harris attempted to influence the race on behalf of Hays in order to get revenge on Hays' opponent for a personal matter.⁵

A grand jury initially indicted 10 individuals in connection with the Harris and Turner case, including Hays and his wife, and six campaign workers. Of the remaining defendants, only one, Tom Varney, also a witness in the Hays case, pled guilty. The others were either acquitted of vote buying charges or had vote buying charges dropped. Prosecutors have announced that their investigation continues into others tied to Harris and may produce further indictments.

The Harris case follows a series of trials related to the 1998 Knott County Democratic primary. Between 2003 and 2004, 10 individuals were indicted on vote buying charges, including a winning candidate in those primaries, Knott County judge-executive Donnie Newsome, who was reelected in 2002. In 2004 Newsome and a supporter were sent to jail and fined. Five other defendants pled guilty to vote buying charges, and three were acquitted. The primary means of vote buying entailed purchasing absentee votes from elderly, infirm, illiterate or poor voters, usually for between $50 and $100. This resulted in an abnormally high number of absentee ballots in the primary. Indictments relating to that same 1998 primary were also brought in 1999, when 6 individuals were indicted for buying the votes of students at a small local college. Five of those indicted were convicted or pled guilty. 8

Absentee vote buying was also an issue in 2002, when federal prosecutors opened an investigation in Kentucky's Clay County after an abnormal number of absentee ballots were filed in the primary and the sheriff halted absentee voting twice over concerns. Officials received hundreds of complaints of vote-buying during the 2002 primary, and state investigators performed follow up investigations in a number of counties, including Knott, Bell, Floyd, Pike, and Maginoff. No indictments have been produced so far.

So far, relatively few incidents of vote-buying have been substantially identified or investigated in the 2004 election. Two instances of vote buying in local 2004 elections have been brought before a grand jury. In one, a Casey County man was indicted for purchasing votes in a local school board race with cash and whiskey. ¹¹ In the second, the grand jury chose not to indict an individual accused of offering to purchase a teenager's vote on a local proposal with beer. ¹²

An extensive vote buying conspiracy has also been uncovered in southern West Virginia. The federal probe, which handed down its first indictment in 2003, has yielded more than a dozen guilty pleas to charges of vote buying and conspiracy in elections since the late 1980s. As this area is almost exclusively dominated by the Democratic Party, vote-buying occurred largely during primary contests.

The first phase of the probe focused on Logan County residents, where vote buying charges were brought in relation to elections in 1996, 2000, 2002 and 2004. In an extraordinary tactic, the FBI planted the former mayor of Logan City, Tom Esposito, as a candidate in a state legislative race. Esposito's cooperation led to guilty pleas from the Logan County Clerk, who pled guilty to selling his vote to Esposito in 1996, ¹³ and another man who took money from Esposito for the purpose of vote buying in 2004. ¹⁴

himself. In 2000, with a large amount of funding from a prominent local lawyer seeking to influence a state delegate election for his wife, Mendez distributed around $10,000 in payments to voters of $10 to $100. Then, in the 2004 primary, Mendez distributed around $2,000 before his arrest. ¹⁵ A deputy of Mendez', the former Logan police chief, also pled guilty to a count of vote buying in 2002. ¹⁶

Prosecutors focusing on neighboring Lincoln County have alleged a long-standing vote-buying conspiracy extending back to the late 1980s. The probe identified Lincoln County Circuit Clerk Greg Stowers as head of a Democratic Party faction which routinely bought votes in order to maintain office. Stowers pled guilty in December 2005 to distributing around $7,000 to buy votes in the 2004 primary. The Lincoln County Assessor, and Stowers' longtime political ally, Jerry Allen Weaver, also pled guilty to conspiracy to buy votes. These were accompanied by four other guilty pleas from party workers for vote buying in primaries. While most specific charges focused on vote buying in the 2004 primary, defendants also admitted buying votes as far back as the 1988, 1990, and 1992 primaries.

The leading conspirators would give party workers candidate slates and cash, which workers would then take to the polling place and use to purchase votes for amounts between $10 and $40 and in one instance, for liquor. Voters would be handed the slate of chosen candidates, and would then be paid upon exiting the polling place. In other cases, the elected officials in question purchased votes in exchange for non-cash rewards, including patronage positions, fixed tickets, favorable tax assessments, and home improvements. ¹⁸

The West Virginia probe is ongoing, as prosecutors are scrutinizing others implicated during the proceedings so far, including a sitting state delegate, who may be under scrutiny for vote buying in a 1990 election, and one of the Lincoln county defendants who previously had vote buying charges against him dropped.¹⁹

Nexis Search Articles Analysis

Note: The search terms used were ones agreed upon by both Job Serebrov and Tova Wang and are available upon request. A more systematic, numerical analysis of the data contained in the Nexis charts is currently being undertaken. What follows is an overview.

Recommendation: In phase 2, consultants should conduct a Nexis search that specifically attempts to follow up on the cases for which no resolution is evident from this particular initial search.

Overview of the Articles

Absentee Ballots

According to press reports, absentee ballots are abused in a variety of ways:

- 1. Campaign workers, candidates and others coerce the voting choices of vulnerable populations, usually elderly voters
- 2. Workers for groups and individuals have attempted to vote absentee in the names of the deceased
- 3. Workers for groups, campaign workers and individuals have attempted to forge the names of other voters on absentee ballot requests and absentee ballots and thus vote multiple times

It is unclear how often actual convictions result from these activities (a handful of articles indicate convictions and guilty pleas), but this is an area in which there have been a substantial number of official investigations and actual charges filed, according to news reports where such information is available. A few of the allegations became part of civil court proceedings contesting the outcome of the election.

While absentee fraud allegations turn up throughout the country, a few states have had several such cases. Especially of note are Indiana, New Jersey, South Dakota, and most particularly, Texas. Interestingly, there were no articles regarding Oregon, where the entire system is vote by mail.

Voter Registration Fraud

According to press reports, the following types of allegations of voter registration fraud are most common:

- 1. Registering in the name of dead people
- 2. Fake names and other information on voter registration forms
- 3. Illegitimate addresses used on voter registration forms
- 4. Voters being tricked into registering for a particular party under false pretenses

5. Destruction of voter registration forms depending on the party the voter registered with

There was only one self evident instance of a noncitizen registering to vote. Many of the instances reported on included official investigations and charges filed, but few actual convictions, at least from the news reporting. There have been multiple reports of registration fraud in California, Colorado, Florida, Missouri, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

Voter Intimidation and Suppression

This is the area which had the most articles in part because there were so many allegations of intimidation and suppression during the 2004 election. Most of these remained allegations and no criminal investigation or prosecution ensued. Some of the cases did end up in civil litigation.

This is not to say that these alleged activities were confined to 2004 – there were several allegations made during every year studied. Most notable were the high number of allegations of voter intimidation and harassment reported during the 2003 Philadelphia mayoral race.

A very high number of the articles were about the issue of challenges to voters' registration status and challengers at the polling places. There were many allegations that planned challenge activities were targeted at minority communities. Some of the challenges were concentrated in immigrant communities.

However, the tactics alleged varied greatly. The types of activities discussed also include the following:

- Photographing or videotaping voters coming out of polling places.
- Improper demands for identification
- Poll watchers harassing voters
- Poll workers being hostile to or aggressively challenging voters
- Disproportionate police presence
- Poll watchers wearing clothes with messages that seemed intended to intimidate
- Insufficient voting machines and unmanageably long lines

Although the incidents reported on occurred everywhere, not surprisingly, many came from "battleground" states. There were several such reports out of Florida, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

"Dead Voters and Multiple Voting"

There were a high number of articles about people voting in the names of the dead and voting more than once. Many of these articles were marked by allegations of big numbers of people committing these frauds, and relatively few of these allegations turning out to be accurate according to investigations by the newspapers themselves, elections officials and criminal investigators. Often the problem turned out to be a result of administrative error, poll workers mis-marking of voter lists, a flawed registration list and/or errors made in the attempt to match names of voters on the list with the names of the people who voted. In a good number of cases, there were allegations that charges of double voting by political leaders were an effort to scare people away from the voting process.

Nonetheless there were a few cases of people actually being charged and/or convicted for these kinds of activities. Most of the cases involved a person voting both by absentee ballot and in person. A few instances involved people voting both during early voting and on Election Day, which calls into question the proper marking and maintenance of the voting lists. In many instances, the person charged claimed not to have voted twice on purpose. A very small handful of cases involved a voter voting in more than one county and there was one substantiated case involving a person voting in more than one state. Other instances in which such efforts were alleged were disproved by officials.

In the case of voting in the name of a dead person, the problem lay in the voter registration list not being properly maintained, i.e. the person was still on the registration list as eligible to vote, and a person taking criminal advantage of that. In total, the San Francisco Chronicle found 5 such cases in March 2004; the AP cited a newspaper analysis of five such persons in an Indiana primary in May 2004; and a senate committee found two people to have voted in the names of the dead in 2005.

As usual, there were a disproportionate number of such articles coming out of Florida. Notably, there were three articles out of Oregon, which has one hundred percent vote-by-mail.

Vote Buying

There were a surprising number of articles about vote buying cases. A few of these instances involved long-time investigations in three particular jurisdictions as detailed in the vote buying summary. There were more official investigations, indictments and convictions/pleas in this area. All of these cases are concentrated in the Midwest and South.

Deceptive Practices

In 2004 there were numerous reports of intentional disinformation about voting eligibility and the voting process meant to confuse voters about their rights and when and where to vote. Misinformation came in the form of flyers, phone calls, letters, and even people going door to door. Many of the efforts were reportedly targeted at minority communities. A disproportionate number of them came from key battleground states, particularly Florida, Ohio, and Pennsylvania. From the news reports found, only one of these instances was officially investigated, the case in Oregon involving the destruction of voter registration forms. There were no reports of prosecutions or any other legal proceeding.

Non-citizen Voting

There were surprisingly few articles regarding noncitizen registration and voting – just seven all together, in seven different states across the country. They were also evenly split between allegations of noncitizens registering and noncitizens voting. In one case charges were filed against ten individuals. In one case a judge in a civil suit found there was illegal noncitizen voting. Three instances prompted official investigations. Two cases, from this nexis search, remained just allegations of noncitizen voting.

Felon Voting

Although there were only thirteen cases of felon voting, some of them involved large numbers of voters. Most notably, of course, are the cases that came to light in the Washington gubernatorial election contest (see Washington summary) and in Wisconsin (see Wisconsin summary). In several states, the main problem has the large number of ineligible felons that remained on the voting list.

Election Official Fraud

In most of the cases in which fraud by elections officials is suspected or alleged, it is difficult to determine whether it is incompetence or a crime. There are several cases of ballots gone missing, ballots unaccounted for and ballots ending up in a worker's possession. In two cases workers were said to have changed peoples' votes. The one instance in which widespread ballot box stuffing by elections workers was alleged was in Washington State. The judge in the civil trial of that election contest did not find that elections workers had committed fraud. Four of the cases are from Texas.

Brennan Analysis Voter Fraud Report FINAL.doc Fed Crime Election Fraud (JS).doc

Analysis of the September 15, 2005 Voter Fraud Report Submitted to the New Jersey Attorney General

By The Brennan Center for Justice at NYU School of Law and Dr. Michael McDonald of George Mason University

General

A September 15, 2005 Report submitted to the New Jersey Attorney General included lists of purportedly illegitimate votes in New Jersey in the 2004 general election, including lists of 10,969 individuals who purportedly voted twice and lists of 4,756 voters who were purportedly dead or incarcerated in November 2004. For the present Analysis of the Report, the lists of voters submitted to the New Jersey Attorney General, as well as a copy of the New Jersey county voter registration files were obtained, and an initial investigation of the report's claims was conducted. The analysis shows that the lists submitted are substantially flawed.

The Analysis is based on methodology only: its authors did not gain access to original documents related to registration or original pollbook records; only recently were copies of the counties' original registration data files acquired and compiled, which contain some notable gaps; and the lists submitted to the Attorney General contain significant errors and little documentation, which complicated the analysis. Nonetheless, the analysts say that information collected is sufficient for generally assessing the quality of evidence presented to support the September 15 report. Analysis of the suspect lists reveals that the evidence submitted does not show what it purports to show: cause for concern that there is serious risk of widespread fraud given the state of the New Jersey voter registration rolls.

These suspect lists were compiled by attempting to match the first name, last name, and birth date of persons on county voter registration files. Entries that supposedly "matched" other entries were apparently deemed to represent the same individual, voting twice. This methodology was similar to the method used in compiling the notoriously inaccurate Florida "purge lists" of suspected ineligible felons in 2000 and 2004. As Florida's experience shows, matching names and birth dates in the voter registration context can easily lead to false conclusions – as was almost certainly the case here.

This Analysis reveals several serious problems with the methodology used to compile the suspect lists that compromise the lists' practical value. For example, the data used in the Report from one county appears to be particularly suspect and anomalous, and may have substantially skewed the overall results. In addition, middle initials were ignored throughout all counties, so that "JA. Smith" was presumed to be the same person as "J G. Smith." Suffixes were also ignored, so that fathers and sons – like "BJohnson" and "BJohnson, Jr." – were said to be the same person.

Underlying many of the entries on these lists, and similar lists compiled in Florida and elsewhere, is a presumption that two records with the same name and date of birth must represent the same person. As explained in this analysis, this presumption is not consistent with basic statistical principles. Even when votes appear to have been cast in two different cities under the same name and birth date, statistics show that voter fraud is not necessarily to blame. With 3.6 million persons who voted in the 2004 election in New Jersey, the chance that some have the same name and birth date is not far-fetched.

Analysis of the Claim of Double Voting by 4,497 Individuals

Attempts to match data on one list to data on another list will often yield "false positives:" two records that at first appear to be a match but do not actually represent the same person. The natural incidence of "false positives" for a matching exercise of this scale – especially when, as here, conducted with relatively little attention to detail – readily explains the ostensible number of double votes.

1,803 of these 4,397 records of ostensibly illegal votes seem to be the product of a glitch in the compilation of the registration files. These records reflect two registration entries by the same person from the same address, with a notation next to each that the individual has voted. For example, 55-year-old W A. Connors, living at 253
B Ave. in a New York commuter suburb, is listed on the data files with an (erroneous) first registration date in 1901 and a second registration date in 1993; Mr.
Connors is thus represented twice on the data files submitted. Each of these entries also indicates that WA. Connors at 253 B Ave voted in 2004. There is no credible indication, however, that Mr. Connors actually voted twice; indeed, given the clearly erroneous registration date on the files, it is far more likely that data error is to blame for the doubly logged vote as well.
More plausibly, the bulk of these 1,803 records may be traced to irregularities in the data processing and compilation process for one single county: the Middlesex County registration file accounts for only 10% of registered voters in the state but 78% of these alleged double votes. The suspect lists themselves contain an acknowledgment that the problem in Middlesex is probably not fraud: 99% of these Middlesex voters are labeled on the lists submitted to the Attorney General with a notation that the record is "less likely" to indicate an illegal double vote.
Another 1,257 entries of the 4,397 records probably represent similar data errors – also largely driven by a likely glitch in the Middlesex County file, which is also vastly over represented in this category. These records show ever-so-slight variations in records listed with the same date of birth at the same address: for example, the same first and last names, but different middle initials or suffixes (e.g., J T. Kearns, Sr., and J T. Kearns, Jr., both born the same day and living at the same address; or J E. Allen and J P. Allen, born the same day and living at the same address).
Approximately 800 of the entries on the list likely represent different people, with different addresses and different middle initials or suffixes. For example, WS. Smith, living in a northern New Jersey town, and WC. Smith, living in another town two hours away, share the same date of birth but are not the same person. Nor are TBrown, living in a New York commuter suburb, and TH. Brown, Jr., living in a small town over an hour west, despite the fact that they also share the same birth date. About three-quarters of the entries in this category reveal data that affirmatively conflict – for example, a middle initial ("WS.") in one case, and a different middle initial ("WC.") in another, listed at different addresses. There is absolutely no good reason to conclude that these individuals are in fact the same, when the available evidence indicates the contrary.

For approximately 200 of the entries in this category, however, less information is available. These entries show a middle initial ("J W. Davis") in one case, and no middle initial ("J Davis") in another – again, at different addresses. The lack of the middle initial is ambiguous: it could mean that one of the J Davis in question has no middle name, or it could mean that the middle initial was simply omitted in a particular registration entry. Although these entries involve less conclusive affirmative evidence of a false match than the entries noted above, there is still no good reason to believe that "J W. Davis" and "J Davis," at different addresses, represent the same person.
Of the individuals remaining, there are serious concerns with the accuracy of the dates of birth. Seven voters were apparently born in January 1, 1880 – which is most likely a system default for registrations lacking date-of-birth information. For 227 voters, only the month and year of birth are listed: this means only that two voters with the same name were born in the same month and year, an unsurprising coincidence in a state of several million people.
That leaves approximately 289 votes cast under the same name and birth date – like votes cast by "P S. Rosen," born in the middle of the baby boom – but from two different addresses. It may appear strange, but there may be two P S. Rosens, born on the same date in 1948 – and such coincidences are surprisingly common. For any one person, the odds of someone else having the same name and birth date is small. But because there are so many voters in New Jersey, a sizable number will have the same name and birth date simply by chance. In a group of just 23 people, it is more likely than not that two will share the same birthday. For 40 people, the probability is 90%. Many, if not most, of the 289 alleged double votes of persons registered at different addresses most likely reflect two separate individuals sharing a first name, last name, middle intial, and birth date.

The September 15 Report makes much of the raw potential for foul play based on the unsurprising fact that there are voters who appear on the New Jersey registration rolls more than once. As noted above, many of the names identified reflect two different individuals and not simply duplicate entries. But there is no doubt that there are duplicate entries on New Jersey's registration rolls. It is well known that voter registration rolls contain "deadwood" – registration entries for individuals no longer living at a given address or deceased. There is no evidence, however, that these extra registrations are used for widespread illegal voting. Moreover, the problem of deadwood will soon be largely resolved: both the National Voter Registration Act of 1993 and the Help America

Vote Act of 2002 require states to implement several systems and procedures as of January 1, 2006, that will clean the voter rolls of duplicate or invalid entries while protecting eligible voters from unintended disfranchisement.

The Federal Crime of Election Fraud By Craig Donsanto

In The Federal Crime of Election Fraud, Donsanto addresses the role of the United States Department of Justice in matters of election fraud. Specifically, it answers the most frequently asked questions concerning the federal law enforcement role in election matters. Particularly, what sort of election-related conduct is potentially actionable as a federal crime, what specific statutory theories apply to frauds occurring in elections lacking federal candidates on the ballot, what federalism, procedural, and policy considerations impact on the federalization of this type of case, and how Assistant United States Attorneys should respond to this type of complaint.

Donsanto indicates that as a general rule, the federal crime of voter fraud embraces only organized efforts to corrupt of the election process itself: i.e., the registration of voters, the casting of ballots, and the tabulation and certification of election results. Moreover, this definition excludes all activities that occur in connection with the political campaigning process, unless those activities are themselves illegal under some other specific law or prosecutorial theory. This definition also excludes isolated acts of individual wrongdoing that are not part of an organized effort to corrupt the voting process. Finally, Donsanto points out that mistakes and other gaffs that inevitably occur are not included as voter fraud. Where mistakes occur on a significant enough level to potentially affect the outcome of an election, the appropriate remedy is an election contest brought by the loser seeking civil judicial redress through the appropriate state election contest process.

Along with the limits discussed above, prosecuting election fraud offenses in federal court is further complicated by the constitutional limits that are placed on federal power over the election process. The conduct of elections is primarily a state rather than a federal activity.

Donsanto lists four types of election fraud: schemes to purposely and corruptly register voters who either do not exist, or who are known by the putative defendant to be ineligible to vote under applicable state law; schemes to cast, record or fraudulently tabulate votes for voters who do not participate in the voting act at all; schemes to corrupt the voting act of voters who do participate in the voting act to a limited extent; and, schemes to knowingly prevent voters qualified voters from voting.

Donsanto lists four situations where federal prosecution is appropriate: Where the objective of the conduct is to corrupt the outcome of a federal elective contest, or where the consequential effect of the corrupt conduct impacts upon the vote count for federal office; Where the object of the scheme is to discriminate against racial, ethnic or language minority groups, the voting rights of which have been specifically protected by federal statues such as the Voting Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. section 1973 et seq.; Where federalization is required in order to redress longstanding patters of electoral fraud, either at the request of state or local authorities, or in the face of longstanding inaction by state authorities who appear to be unwilling or unable to respond under local law; and, Where there is a factual basis to believe that fraudulent registration or voting activity is sufficiently connected to other from of criminal activity that perusing the voter fraud angle will yield evidence useful in the prosecution of other categories of federal offense.

Donsanto lists four advantages to federal prosecution: voter fraud investigations are labor intensive. Local law enforcement agencies often lack the manpower and the financial resources to take these cases on; voter fraud matters are always politically sensitive and very high profile endeavors at the local level. Local prosecutors (who are usually themselves elected) often shy away from prosecuting them for that reason; the successful prosecution of voter fraud cases demands that critical witnesses be examined under oath before criminal charges based on their testimony are filed. Many states lack the broad grand jury process that exists in the federal system; and, the defendants in voter fraud cases are apt to be politicians - or agents of politicians - and it is often impossible for either the government or the defendant to obtain a fair trial in a case that is about politics and is tried to a locally-drawn jury. The federal court system provides for juries to be drawn from broader geographic base, thus often avoiding this problem.

Several prosecutorial theories used by United States Attorneys to federalize election frauds are discussed. These include: schemes by polling officers to violate their duty under state law to safeguard the integrity of the election process by purposefully allowing void ballots to be cast (stuffing the ballot box), or by intentionally rendering fraudulent vote tallies which can be prosecuted as civil rights violations under 18 U.S.C. sections 241 or 242; schemes to stimulate or reward voter registration by offering or giving voters things having monetary value violate the "payment for registering" clause of 42 U.S.C. section 19731(c); schemes to register voters fraudulently through providing election officials materially false information about the voter's eligibility for the franchise; and, schemes to obtain and cast ballots that are materially defective in nonfederal elections can still be prosecuted under 18 U.S.C. section 1341. There are also some other federal statutes involved in election fraud cases such as 18 U.S,.C. section 597 that prohibits making expenditures for the specific purpose of stimulating voters to cast ballots for candidates seeking the federal offices of Senator, Congressman or President and 42 U.S.C. section 1973i (e) that prohibits voting more than once in elections where federal candidates are on the ballot.

Donsanto lists four questions used by prosecutors in evaluating the credibility of election complaints: does the substance of the complaint assuming it can be proven through investigation - suggest a potential crime; is the complaint sufficiently fact-specific that it provides leads for investigators to pursue; is there a federal statute that can be used to federalize the criminal activity at issue; and, is there a special federal interest in the matter that warrants federalization rather than deferral to state law enforcement.

All federal election investigations must avoid the following: non-interference in elections unless absolutely necessary to preserve evidence; interviewing voters during active voting periods; seizing official election documentation; investigative activity inside open polls; and prosecutors must adhere to 18 U.S.C. section 592, prohibiting the stationing of armed men at places where voting activity is taking place.

Finally, Donsanto indicates that election crimes based on race or language minority status are treated as civil rights matters under the Voting Rights Act.

votebuyingsummary.doc

Major Vote Buying Cases Summary

Between 2001 and 2006, allegations and convictions for vote buying and conspiracies to buy votes were concentrated in three states: Illinois, West Virginia and Kentucky.

Deleted: which have resulted in convictions on these charges a

In East St. Louis, Illinois, nine individuals, including a former city council member and the head of the local Democratic Party, Charles Powell, Jr., were convicted or pled guilty to vote buying and conspiracy to commit election fraud during the 2004 general election. The government's conspiracy case was almost entirely based on taped conversations in which the defendants discussed buying votes for $5 and whether this would be adequate. Federal prosecutors alleged that the vote buying was financed with $79,000 transferred from the County Democratic Party shortly before the election, although county officials have not been charged. Four defendants were convicted of purchasing or offering to purchase at least one vote directly, while Democratic Party chairman was only convicted of conspiracy. Earlier, three precinct officials and one precinct worker pled guilty to buying votes for $5 or $10 in that same election.²

Eastern Kentucky has witnessed a series of vote buying cases over the last several years. The most recent revolved around Ross Harris, a Pike County political fundraiser and coal executive. and his associate Loren Glenn Turner. Harris and Turner were convicted in September 2004 of vote buying, mail fraud, and several other counts.³ Prosecutors alleged Harris and Turner conspired to buy votes and provided the necessary funds in an unsuccessful 2002 bid for Pike County district judge by former State Senator Doug Hays. Harris supplied nearly $40,000, Turner laundered the money through straw contributors, and the cash was then disbursed in the form of $50 checks ostensibly for 'vote hauling', the legal practice of paying campaign workers to get voters to the polls which is notorious as a cover for buying votes. 4 Harris attempted to influence the race on behalf of Hays in order to get revenge on Hays' opponent for a personal matter.5

A grand jury initially indicted 10 individuals in connection with the Harris and Turner case. including Hays and his wife, and six campaign workers. Of the remaining defendants, only one, Tom Varney, also a witness in the Hays case, pled guilty. The others were either acquitted of vote buying charges or had vote buying charges dropped. Prosecutors have announced that their investigation continues into others tied to Harris and may produce further indictments.

The Harris case follows a series of trials related to the 1998 Knott County Democratic primary. Between 2003 and 2004, 10 individuals were indicted on vote buying charges, including a winning candidate in those primaries, Knott County judge-executive Donnie Newsome, who was reelected in 2002. In 2004 Newsome and a supporter were sent to jail and fined. Five other defendants pled guilty to vote buying charges, and three were acquitted. The primary means of vote buying entailed purchasing absentee votes from elderly, infirm, illiterate or poor voters, usually for between $50 and $100. This resulted in an abnormally high number of absentee ballots in the primary. Indictments relating to that same 1998 primary were also brought in 1999, when 6 individuals were indicted for buying the votes of students at a small local college. Five of those indicted were convicted or pled guilty. §

Absentee vote buying was also an issue in 2002, when federal prosecutors opened an investigation in Kentucky's Clay County after an abnormal number of absentee ballots were filed in the primary and the sheriff halted absentee voting twice over concerns. Officials received hundreds of complaints of vote-buying during the 2002 primary, and state investigators performed follow up investigations in a number of counties, including Knott, Bell, Floyd, Pike, and Maginoff. No indictments have been produced so far.

So far, relatively few incidents of vote-buying have been substantially identified or investigated in the 2004 election. Two instances of vote buying in local 2004 elections have been brought before a grand jury. In one, a Casey County man was indicted for purchasing votes in a local school board race with cash and whiskey. ¹¹ In the second, the grand jury chose not to indict an individual accused of offering to purchase a teenager's vote on a local proposal with beer. ¹²

An extensive vote buying conspiracy has also been uncovered in southern West Virginia. The federal probe, which handed down its first indictment in 2003, has yielded more than a dozen guilty pleas to charges of vote buying and conspiracy in elections since the late 1980s. As this area is almost exclusively dominated by the Democratic Party, vote-buying occurred largely during primary contests.

The first phase of the probe focused on Logan County residents, where vote buying charges were brought in relation to elections in 1996, 2000, 2002 and 2004. In an extraordinary tactic, the FBI planted the former mayor of Logan City, Tom Esposito, as a candidate in a state legislative race. Esposito's cooperation led to guilty pleas from the Logan County Clerk, who pled guilty to selling his vote to Esposito in 1996, ¹³ and another man who took money from Esposito for the purpose of vote buying in 2004. ¹⁴

himself. In 2000, with a large amount of funding from a prominent local lawyer seeking to influence a state delegate election for his wife, Mendez distributed around $10,000 in payments to voters of $10 to $100. Then, in the 2004 primary, Mendez distributed around $2,000 before his arrest. ¹⁵ A deputy of Mendez', the former Logan police chief, also pled guilty to a count of vote buying in 2002. ¹⁶

Prosecutors focusing on neighboring Lincoln County have alleged a long-standing vote-buying conspiracy extending back to the late 1980s. The probe identified Lincoln County Circuit Clerk Greg Stowers as head of a Democratic Party faction which routinely bought votes in order to maintain office. Stowers pled guilty in December 2005 to distributing around $7,000 to buy votes in the 2004 primary. The Lincoln County Assessor, and Stowers' longtime political ally, Jerry Allen Weaver, also pled guilty to conspiracy to buy votes. These were accompanied by four other guilty pleas from party workers for vote buying in primaries. While most specific charges focused on vote buying in the 2004 primary, defendants also admitted buying votes as far back as the 1988, 1990, and 1992 primaries.

The leading conspirators would give party workers candidate slates and cash, which workers would then take to the polling place and use to purchase votes for amounts between $10 and $40 and in one instance, for liquor. Voters would be handed the slate of chosen candidates, and would then be paid upon exiting the polling place. In other cases, the elected officials in question purchased votes in exchange for non-cash rewards, including patronage positions, fixed tickets, favorable tax assessments, and home improvements. ¹⁸

The West Virginia probe is ongoing, as prosecutors are scrutinizing others implicated during the proceedings so far, including a sitting state delegate, who may be under scrutiny for vote buying in a 1990 election, and one of the Lincoln county defendants who previously had vote buying charges against him dropped.¹⁹

Subject Re: working group

I have attached the list of the working groups participants. Peggy, you may want to double check this list incase I have left anyone out.

In place of name tags we just used the tent cards for the APIA working group. This seemed to be effective because it was easier to identify the person who was speaking but we could use both.

Peggy,

In preparation for the logistics of this week's working group, I need to know how many people to expect for the meeting. Also, if you still need me to make name tags, I will need a list of attendees and the avery label size.

Also, I will need help from Laiza on the table tents, or we can see if she has the time to help with that.

Thanks!

Sounds great. It did seem to work just fine for our Asian Language group. Is there going to be a transcriptionist? If so, has anyone taken care of that?

Did you still want to provide the cookies or snacks, or shall I get that from Cafe Mozart (where I am planning to get the coffee). I can just buy a few boxes of cookies for the break.

Elle:

I think our number will be about 21 (with the Working Group members, consultants, possible EAC Commissioners and staff, and the court reporter). I'll have a better idea of the final list after I brief Commissioners tomorrow morning. Devon noted that they used only tent cards for the Asian Language Working Group. That might be sufficient for this group and would cut back on some of the work we have to do in preparation. --- Peggy

Subject RE: Travel Authorization Form

You are welcome!

Adventure Travel should send you all of your travel information once they verify the travel authorization. If you do not receive your itinerary by Monday morning please let me know.

It is a good idea to carry your travel authorization with you at the airport because occasionally (although very rarely) some of our guests have been asked to show their authorization numbers.

Let me know if you have any other questions.

Thank you, Devon. I have not heard from the travel agency since I picked the travel times, and do not have an itinerary, nor hotel information. The last time I traveled to the EAC I did not receive this form till afterwards. Is there something I may need this for in advance or during my travel?
